In order to insure that financial and personal information is kept private, arrays of technological procedures and devices have been put into place. All transactions are transmitted in a secure environment using 128-bit encryption. All information is stored in a mainframe environment as opposed to a PC based environment. Conservation Employees’ Credit Union and our service provider have gone to great lengths to incorporate the highest level of security available.

If I forget to exit, will I be logged off Member Access On-line automatically?

Yes, after only a few minutes of no activity your account will be logged off to ensure no one will have access to your account. In order to protect yourself you need to remember not to give out your account information, security code, or account number. Do not leave your PC unattended within range of others, while you are acquiring account information.

Can anyone else see my account information?

Member Access On-line requires a correct account number and password. Unless you share your password with someone else no one other than you will be able to access your account information through Member Access On-line.

Do I have to purchase special software to use Member Access On-line?

NO! Member Access On-line has been designed to work with the most current version of Internet browsers, such as Microsoft Internet Explorer and Netscape Navigator. The system does require the browser have 128-bit encryption. If you do not have the latest version of Internet Explorer or Netscape Navigator, you can access the web site from the sign-in page. Just go to Member Access On-line and click on the browser of your choice.

What if I forget my password?

To prevent intruders, your password may be entered incorrectly only a few times before your Member Access account is locked out. For security reasons, your account must be reset by a CECU employee. You will need to call the credit union at 573-522-4000 or come to our office and provide us with required information. We will assign you a new password.

My password doesn’t work, what happened?

You may have entered the password incorrectly. The password is case sensitive and must be entered exactly as it was originally entered. The most common problem is you may have your CAPS LOCK key on, which will make the password incorrect even if you entered the right keys. If you have tried too many times to enter your password and the system has locked you out you will need to contact the credit union to set up a new password.
